

ABOUT MOUNT EYRE VINEYARDS

Mount Eyre Vineyards combines a European family tradition of winemaking with a generation of experience in Australian viticulture.

From our roots in the tiny towns of Alestena, in the Peloponnese, Greece, and Vallo della Lucania, Italy, the Tsironis and Iannuzzi families have an unbroken involvement in wine extending back centuries, tilling their vines and offering wine to friends and visitors alike.

Mount Eyre Vineyards has been energetic and innovative, typifying the vigour and vision of the modern Australian wine industry, to produce distinctive high quality regional wines for the pleasure of the world's wine drinkers.

As well as domestic sales, Mount Eyre Vineyards enjoys a steadily expanding export market.

At Mount Eyre Vineyards we have great respect for terroir. We have combined the different types of soils, aspects and altitude of our exceptional vineyards to produce distinctive regional wines.

Our Australian vineyard story starts in Broke, in the Hunter Valley, where the Three Ponds vineyard lies on the sandy loam river flats of Monkey Place Creek. Planted in 1970 by Neil Grosser, it is still carefully managed by Neil and his son David today. In Broke, Mount Eyre Vineyards have over 30 acres of semillon, chardonnay, chambourcin and shiraz.

To any astute judge of vineyards, Mount Eyre Vineyards' second property, the Holman Estate, Pokolbin, represents a most exceptional site. In the heart of the Hunter Valley, its deep red loams have proven their worth and been shown by history to be the backbone of many great Hunter Valley red wines. Here 16 acres are planted to shiraz, merlot and viognier.

It is also the site of Mount Eyre Vineyards guesthouse and olive grove, where we produce a small quantity of premium olive oil.

Mount Eyre Vineyards currently offers a broad selection of wines to suit different budgets and tastes.
